“ Mrs. Mallon was my teacher during high school, then became a mentor when I was in university (she came to my undergrad graduation), and then a friend as I also became a teacher. To know Mrs. Mallon was also knowing how fiercely she loved her family, her deep commitment, or even her duty to the environment, and her loyalty as a friend. I know how cliché this sounds, but I would not be where I am today without her advocacy, mentorship, and most of all, her friendship. I thank her for all she did for me. We will never see her like again.

“ Barbara Mallon, who passed away at the age of 85, was a woman whose life was defined by love, generosity, and a deep connection to nature. More than anything, Barbara cherished her family — she would give and do anything to keep them close and to help them, always putting their needs before her own.

Teaching was another of Barbara’s great passions. With a Master’s degree in Education, she spent her career inspiring students in the classroom, and even after retirement, she never stopped teaching. Whether it was tutoring students for the SATs or volunteering to lead educational walks for children through the beach, gardens, and woods, she found joy in sharing knowledge and sparking curiosity in young minds.

Barbara also had a profound love of the natural world. A proud Master Gardener, she dedicated countless hours to the beauty and care of the outdoors, volunteering at the Oyster Bay Arboretum and actively participating in gardening groups, especially the Port Washington Garden club.

She was a strong and determined woman who knew what she wanted in life, yet her greatest desire was always to help others through her teaching, her time, her wisdom, and her unwavering love.

Barbara’s life was a true testament to kindness, strength, and the enduring power of giving
