“ It's December 2022, and the choir at the Methodist Church and I are deep in our preparation for Christmas. Starting in October, when we first started learning new carols and anthems and renewing our knowledge of the older ones, and as I go through the music library and prepare the rehearsals by putting out the music for the individual singers who have left their names on the older music, I am inevitably reminded of Doug. He never wrote his name on the music, but he had a unique way of marking the music, something that helped him to navigate those pages, even though he could barely read them. And as I put his old copies of different anthems and carols to the side -- partially out of respect, and partially because nobody but Doug knew what those markings meant -- I also remember that THIS was his favorite time of year. He was literally bursting with Christmas energy each year, and always working on some project with Christmas music, whether at the church, with the band, or at home with some CD burning.
